Why are these morning our neighbor of the Tribune grown out of the petty jealousies of our reproduced it for the purpose of de- public men. This is to some extent true, nouncing the author in his usual but there is another and greater reason for style. He makes no specifications, but in general terms denounces the noble dignity which it demands. Educacommunication in the Republican as | tion will supply and dignify our labor. To lying and slanderous, teeming "with make us prosperous and happy we need: misrepresentations and calumnies," and its author as a "malignant boot, wagon, hat makers, etc. 4. A co-op-

The writer of the communication need not feel hadle abfor he probably understands that the our own State, and what applies to editor of the Tribune has made up that State applies with equal force to his mind that he is a Northern man, and he regards Northern men, generally, as "malignant reptiles." It requires little or no provocation to induce him to bestow his choicest epithets on that class of men.

The readers of the Tribune have doubtless noted the fact that, while denouncing the communication in general terms, the main fact stated, to wit: That Professors were the Southern Confederacy, after we turned out of the Faculty because they were Northern men, is not disputed. The editor took great pains to say a few days ago that the agricultural editor of that paper had nothing to do with its editorials, but it is a fact that can not escape notice, that when the agricultural editor was editor-in-chief, he had the manliness to express his true sentiments on this cation from a Democrat on Hayes management. He makes no denial willing that he shall be heard. of the main charge, but takes great satisfaction in denouncing as " malignant reptiles," those who make it. This policy may suit him, but a fairs minded public will know how to apprecinte it.

Northern men have a perfect right avocation that suits them. They have a perfect right to express their thankful to say I am completely cured, views on the subject we have been discussing, or any other subject, with- I am, sir, yours respectfully, out offering any apology to the editor of the Tribune, or any one else. By the real people, the tax-payers generally, they will be welcomed. But these are selfevident propositions, and it is not necessary to repeat them.

The more our neighbor talks, the angrier he gets. He winds up his diatribe yesterday by saying that the A Very Pesirable Farm the Springfield Republican "is simply ONE AND A HALF MILES FROM THE the Springfield Republican "is simply infamous." Here is the paragraph:

At the same time, an invalid daughter of Dr. Humes was at his house, and she did not recover from the shock of this indignity for hours. The editor of the Tribune says the allusion to the outrage was "infamous." We say, and every reasonable man with whom we have conversed, who knew of it says, the act itself was infamous.
